QUARTERLY LIST OF NEW PUBLICATIONS.

AGRICULTURE.

New England Farmer. Published by John B. Russell; and edited by Thomas G. Fessenden. Boston. 1824.

This is a weekly journal printed in a royal quarto form, and devoted to agriculture. Three volumes have been published. In its purposes and general character it resembles the Baltimore American Farmer, which we noticed on a former occasion. The New England Farmer, of course, is chiefly confined to the agriculture of the eastern states; although it contains communications of general utility sent from different parts of the Union, and such occasional selections from the best agricultural works, as are important in conveying useful knowledge to the farmer. Well conducted journals of this sort must have a most beneficial effect on the community. To instruct the farmer in his art, and teach him easier methods of tilling his soil, and drawing from it a more abundant product, is to diminish the expense of cultivation, and save the same proportion of labor to be employed in an additional production.

The Editor of the New England Farmer is well known to the public as an able writer, and if we mistake not, this journal will prove, that his ability has been employed with judgment and success in the walks of agriculture. Among his contributors are some of our most distinguished citizens and experienced agriculturalists; and his work may undoubtedly be recommended to the farmers of New England in particular, as containing a mass of knowledge highly useful to them, which could not be obtained from any other single source. Farmers in every part of the United States will also find it valuable, as a repository of facts on the principles and practices of agriculture in general.

Conversations on English Grammar; explaining the Principles and Rules of the Language, illustrated by appropriate Exercises, adridged and adapted to the Use of Schools. By C. M. Ingersoll. Fourth Edition. 12mo. pp. 298. Portland.

It is not a common thing among us for a work to pass through four large editions within as many years after its first appearance, and yet such has been the good fortune of the Conversations on English Grammar. This success is itself an indication of the favorable light, in which the public is disposed to regard the author's labors. His book has been recommended by some of the principal teachers in the country, and would seem to be going into extensive use. His plan may be best understood from his own words. 'A natural and easy gradation in introducing and connecting the different parts of speech, and in explaining the inflections and properties peculiar to each; presenting, progressively, that only which the learner is prepared to understand; and illustrating the rules and principles by examples and practical exercises, in a course of familiar Conversations; seemed to the author to be the method best adapted to remove this difficulty, and to excite attention and curiosity in those who are endeavoring to acquire a knowledge of English Grammar.' In conformity with these views the author has thrown the whole subject into a series of conversations, or dialogues, and it has been a special object with him to simplify and methodise his materials as far as possible, and to arrange them in a strictly analytical order. The plan seems to us good, and the outlines well drawn; those only who are experienced in teaching from it can tell whether all its parts are successfully executed.

The author pretends not to any new discoveries in Grammar. He is quite contented to take the language as it stands, and teach it according to principles, which nature and custom have long ago established. He aims to improve the manner of teaching, and to facilitate acquisition, but not to invent new instruments, nor unfold mysteries. His remarks on the subjunctive mood are judicious, and worthy of being carefully studied by many, who might deem it no compliment to their school learning to be sent back to their grammar. Among those who are accounted the best writers of the present day, nothing is more common than an incorrect use of the subjunctive mood. It is perpetually confounded with the indicative, and one is put for the other without discrimination. These sins against grammatical purity may easily be corrected by proper attention. The rules of distinction are broad and plain; they are well elucidated by Murray; and Mr Ingersoll, observing the errors into which authors are constantly falling, has labored to set the subject in a still stronger light, and to explain and impress it by further illustrations.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Pulaski Vindicated from an unsupported Charge, inconsiderately or malignantly introduced in Judge Johnson's Sketches of the Life and Correspondence of Gen. Greene. 8vo. pp. 38. Baltimore.

In his Life of General Green, Judge Johnson has spoken with severity of the conduct of the celebrated Polish Count Pulaski at the battle of Germantown. A friend of Pulaski now living has come forward to vindicate the character of the distinguished Pole, and prove the mistake of the biographer of Green. On a future occasion we shall return to the subject of this pamphlet. Count Pulaski, like Lafayette, engaged as a volunteer in our revolutionary cause, he fought for our liberties, and was slain in the struggle that procured our independence. This is enough to give his name a place in every American heart, and to demand for it a tribute of respectful and cherished remembrance. Pulaski was a brave soldier, a foe to tyrants, and a devoted friend of freedom both in Europe and America.

Governor Worthington's Speech on the Maryland Test Act. 8vo. pp. 40. Baltimore. 1824.

It is a little remarkable, that in the State of Maryland, where the first act of religious toleration, which ever proceeded from a legislative body, was passed, there should exist to this day a religious test. In reading the debates of the Maryland legislature during the last two or three years, it would seem as if the state of public sentiment, feeling, and intelligence were going back again to the ages of darkness, instead of keeping onward with the progress of truth and improvement. Mr Worthington has shown, in the most convincing manner, how repugnant a religious test is to the American Constitution, and to the Constitutions of all the States but two or three. He mentions a singular fact in regard to North Carolina. A person was recently elected to the legislature of the state, whose seat was attempted to be vacated because he refused to submit to the test. But 'it was determined that the state test was repugnant to the Constitution of the United States, and he retained his seat; he was a Jew.'

In Maryland are many Jews of high respectability and influence in society; some of them are wealthy, and contribute their due share to the support of government; and in all respects they have as much interest in the civil and political institutions of the state, and as much at stake in the good management of public concerns, as any other class of citizens. And yet the Constitution of Maryland refuses to these persons any participation in the government, which they help to support, and by which their rights are maintained, and their property secured. How does this agree with the basis of freedom and equal rights on which our political fabric is founded? The Jew is free to pay taxes, but he is not free to think on religious subjects as his conscience dictates. For assuming such a liberty he must suffer the penalty of being deprived of one half of his privileges as a citizen. This is worse than absurd; it is a reproach to the age, and a foul blot on the charter of every free government, which suffers it to exist there. A bill has been several times brought before the legislature of Maryland, proposing to abolish the test, and as it has been urged chiefly on the ground of relieving the Jews, it is commonly known by the name of the Jew Bill. The warmth with which Mr Worthington takes up the cause in his speech, is creditable to his feelings and patriotic principles.

WORKS PROPOSED.

REGISTER OF DEBATES IN CONGRESS.—Gales & Seaton propose to publish a work with this title, to embrace a more full Report of the Speeches on topics of general interest, in each House of Congress, than has ever heretofore been published, or than can be given to the public through the ordinary channel of a newspaper.

The work is to be printed in an octavo form, on super royal paper. It is thought that the debates of the shorter session will make a volume of about 500 pages; the price of which to subscribers will be $3; and that of the longer session about twice as much, that is, one large volume of 1000 pages, or two small ones of 500 pages each; and the price to subscribers $5. An appendix will contain a list of the Members of each House, the yeas and nays in each House on questions which have been the subjects of debate, documents, and proper indexes to the whole.

'This undertaking,' say the Editors, 'is not of course intended to substitute or supersede the Reports of Debates for the National Intelligencer, but rather, by withdrawing the heavy and extended Reports from its columns, to enable the Proprietors of that Journal to furnish, every day, in a comprehensive form, intelligible Reports of the Proceedings and Discussions on the day preceding, in both Houses.'

'The "Register" is necessarily an experiment, but it is an experiment the success of which we have no reason to doubt. Every one who takes an interest in our political history, as well as all those who engage in the duties of political life, must have felt and lamented the want of a Record of Debates in Congress, in a convenient form, with indexes which might lead the inquirer to any subject debated, and to the name of any one engaged in debate. Such a work would be an elementary book for young politicians, and we have no hesitation in asserting that the possession of such a one, from the commencement of the existing government to this day, would be of immense value to the nation, were it only to show what has heretofore been said upon questions which are continually recurring for discussion, and producing needless consumption of time by superfluous debate. What is true of the years that have past, will, as soon as they are gone, be equally true of those in which we live.'

'It is not only, therefore, as a vehicle of present information, but also as a book for future reference—as a National Political Repository and Text-Book, that we hope this work will be both useful and popular.'

This project is so excellent a one, and of such general utility to the country, that it cannot but be hoped the Editors will meet with the fullest encouragement to prosecute the work as they propose.

CAREY & LEA are publishing ENGLISH COMMON LAW REPORTS, condensed and prepared by Thomas Sergeant and John C. Lowber. Five volumes have been published, viz. 1, 2, 5, 6, 7, and vols. 3, 4, and 8 will shortly be published. The price is $5 a volume in numbers. Orders may be addressed to Philip H. Nicklin, Law Bookseller, Philadelphia.

M. R. BARTLETT, of Utica, proposes to publish THE YOUNG LADIES' ASTRONOMY, containing a concise System of Physical, Practical, and Descriptive Astronomy, comprised in twentyseven chapters, divided into fiftythree lessons, designed for the use of schools, and particularly for young ladies.
